Snap Wants a Snack

A Live AI by Genoch story

A Very Hungry Dragon

Snap woke up with a big rumble in his tummy.

"I need a snack," he said. "I need a snack right now."

He was so snappy from hunger that he gave a loud snap at a passing bug. The bug flew away fast.

Pip ran up with his long scarf trailing behind him. He gave the air a big sniff. Then he bent down and did a tiny snip of a blade of grass.

He held it up at Snap with a big grin.

Snap looked at the grass. Then he looked at Pip. Then he let out a small laugh.

"That is not a snack," said Snap. "But you did make me smile. Now let's go find a real one."

The Apple That Got Away

Snap saw a big red apple up in the tree.

"That is the snack I want," he said. He gave a big snap at the apple. He missed. He tumbled into a bush with a loud crash.

Snap landed right on a pile of onions. He was so snappy about it. He let out a big sniff. Then he sniffed again. His eyes went all watery.

Pip ran over. He did a quick snip of a little leaf and used it to fan Snap.

"Is that better?" said Pip.

Snap blinked his wet eyes. "A little," he said. "But this was not the snack I wanted."

A Trail of Good Smells

Pip gave the air a big sniff.

"I smell something good," he said. "Something warm and sweet."

Snap lifted his nose. He took a sniff too. His eyes went wide.

"That way!" said Snap. "Let's go!"

They ran down the path until they saw Mila. She sat at a little table with a big cake right in the middle of it. It was the best snack Snap had ever seen.

Snap got so snappy with joy that he did a little hop. Then he bent down and did a quick snip of a tiny daisy from the grass. He held it out to Mila with a big grin.

Mila laughed. She did a snip with her cake knife and cut two snappy big slices.

"A snack for you," she said, "and a snack for your friend."

Full Bellies and Happy Friends

Snap took a big sniff of his cake. It smelled so good.

Then he took one happy snap. The cake was gone. His tummy gave a soft little rumble — and then it stopped.

"No more rumbles," said Snap. He felt snappy in the best way now.

Mila did a snip of ribbon and tied it round a small flower. She held it out to Snap.

Snap took the flower and gave a sniff. It smelled sweet.

"Thank you," he said. He felt warm all the way to his toes.

The three friends sat together, full and happy. Snap had found his snack. And it was even better with friends by his side.